The Long Walk

We went for a long walk at the weekend. We were outside for several hours. First, we walked to the river, crossed the bridge, walked parallel to the water for a while and then doubled back. Next we scrambled up the hill, through the overgrown nettles and brambles. I got myself in a tangle when my trouser leg got caught on a thorn. When we got to the top of the hill, we were very close to the beach. We wandered on down to the sands. It was very quiet and tranquil as we watched a vessel bob on the crystal clear water. We continued our ramble up a mountain track. It was a gradual slope but it was still quite a trial of endurance to reach the top. The leader of the walking group pointed out a lot of the physical features of the mountain as we went. We stopped for something to eat and to refuel. We lifted all our litter, as we did not want to pollute the countryside. As we set off again dad turned to me with his lopsided grin and said, 'Wait until you see the view from the top!' He was right; it was the single best example of the incredible scenery in our county that I have ever seen.
